THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

BY JANET SAMEH

In April, we had the joy of celebrating 80 years of Temple Beth Sholom. What began with a small group of families looking for a place to gather, worship and create Jewish life has become the vibrant community we know today.

A great deal has changed over the years. But one thing hasn't: people still want and need a place where they can connect and feel that they belong. And TBS provides that.

For our children, it begins at our Sandra and Stanley Malin Early Childhood Center, where our youngest begin to learn, celebrate their first Jewish holidays and make some of their earliest friends. Those connections continue at our Judy and Ron Mack School of Religious Studies, where our children grow in their Jewish journey, celebrate and learn together. Kadima gives our middle school students a Jewish space of their own, while USY offers our teenagers opportunities for friendship, leadership and shared Jewish experiences.

For adults, connections might begin by worshipping together at morning minyan or Shabbat services, or by attending a program that sparks an interest. The many activities sponsored by our Men's Club and Women's League give us opportunities to schmooze while volunteering, learning or simply socializing. Sometimes working together on a project, sharing a meal or showing up regularly for the same activity turns familiar faces into friends and makes our synagogue feel like a community rather than simply a place to go.

For our families, that sense of community is especially meaningful during the important moments in our lives. Together, we celebrate simchas—births, B'nai Mitzvah, weddings and other joyous occasions. And when life is difficult, we come together for shivas and find ways to support one another.

And that is the story of Temple Beth Sholom's 80 years. It isn't simply about buildings, programs or membership numbers. It is about people who walked in, made a connection that became something meaningful and then helped create that same sense of belonging for those who followed.

And as our motto says, Together. Bolder. Stronger. Our strength has always come from the relationships we build with one another.

May 5787 bring new connections, renewed friendships and a deeper sense of belonging for us all.

L'Shanah Tovah Tikateivu — May we be inscribed for a good year.

SCHOOL DIRECTOR

MORE THAN A FIRST DAY: BUILDING CONNECTIONS AT TBSECC

What makes a great first day of preschool? At The Sandra and Stanley Mallin Early Childhood Center and The Lovee and Bob Arum Kindergarten at Temple Beth Sholom, we believe it starts with what happens before that first goodbye.

We understand how important relationships are in the early years. Children thrive when they feel known, secure, and connected, and families want to know that the people caring for their children truly know them, too. That is why we intentionally begin building those relationships before school even starts.

Every child and parent begins the year with a private, one-on-one orientation with their teachers. It is dedicated time to explore the classroom, get comfortable, ask questions, and begin forming the home-school partnership that is such an important part of our program. It also gives teachers an opportunity to begin getting to know each child as an individual—their personality, interests, needs, and the little things that can help make the transition to school feel easier.

The next day, families returned for our Back-to-School Play Date, where children met classmates, parents connected, and our school community began to take shape. The fun continued outdoors with rides on the Jupiter Train, frozen treats, PJ Library, and plenty of time to explore and play on our climbing equipment. Our after-school enrichment instructors joined the fun, too, playing tennis and soccer and dancing with the children while sharing information with parents about the activities available throughout the school year.

By the first official day of school, we could see the difference. Children recognized their teachers and classrooms, parents saw familiar faces, and what could have felt like a brand-new place was already beginning to feel like their school. For some children, that familiarity can make the difference between walking into a completely new environment and returning to a place where they have already begun to feel that they belong.

That sense of belonging is at the heart of who we are. We offer children a nurturing early childhood education filled with meaningful learning, friendships, Jewish traditions, and a community where children and families are known and valued. We know that starting school is a transition for the whole family, and we want parents to feel just as welcomed, connected, and confident in their school community as their children do.

Our new school year is underway, and our classrooms are once again filled with laughter, learning, familiar faces, and new smiles.

Come discover what it means to be part of the TBS ECC family.

JILLIAN POST
RELIGIOUS SCHOOL DIRECTOR

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL UPDATE: A GREAT START TO THE YEAR!

Our Religious School is off to a wonderful start this school year, with students from Kindergarten through high school engaged, learning, and growing together as a Jewish community. It has been a joy to see our classrooms full of energy as students reconnect with friends, teachers, and their Jewish learning.

Our Teen Program Continues to Thrive

One of the highlights of our Religious School is our teen program, which continues to flourish. Yad B'Yad 1, designed for our seventh-grade students, remains a cornerstone of our teen learning experience. This program focuses on Jewish identity and values, helping students explore what it means to be Jewish in today's world as they prepare for and reflect on their b'nai mitzvah journey.

Introducing Yad B'Yad 2: A New Bridge for Our Teens

This year, we are excited to expand our teen program with the launch of Yad B'Yad 2, a new initiative designed specifically for our Post-B'nai Mitzvah students. This program serves as a meaningful bridge, keeping teens connected to our community during a pivotal time in their Jewish journey.

Yad B'Yad 2 focuses on three key areas:

- Teen Leadership – developing the skills and confidence to lead
- Community Outreach – building connections in the Jewish community
- Tikkun Olam – putting Jewish values into action by repairing the world

What makes this program truly special is its dual impact: as students develop real leadership skills, they also have the opportunity to earn community service credit, which can be applied toward the community service requirements at their private or public schools. It's a wonderful way for our teens to give back while continuing their Jewish learning journey, and to see firsthand how their values translate into meaningful action.

We are so proud of the growth of our Religious School and our teen programs, and we look forward to another year of learning, connection, and community. Thank you to our incredible teachers, students, and families for making this possible!

From all of us at the Judy & Ron Mack School of Religious Studies, we wish you and your families a very happy and healthy New Year!

WOMEN'S LEAGUE

SHERYL HONIG
WOMEN'S LEAGUE PRESIDENT

Shana Tova!

As we begin the new year, I want to wish everyone a happy and healthy New Year. As the incoming president of the Women's League, I am excited to have launched our year with the paid up membership brunch. It was a beautiful event filled with good food, good friends, and the start of what I hope will be lifelong friendships.

Our panel discussion was thoughtful and truly brought out the best in us. Through our social, educational, spiritual, and philanthropic programming, we are building bonds of friendship and strength to support ourselves, our families, our synagogue, and our community. Together, we really are stronger.

To that end, we are also collaborating with our wonderful Men's Club to make our synagogue the warmest and friendliest in Las Vegas. I know that what we build together will be resilient.

I look forward to greeting you at our upcoming events.
